25. Description of Major Duties and Responsibilities (See Attached)

INTRODUCTION

This position is located in the Simulation, Training and Instrumentation Command (STRICOM), which is a Major Subordinate Command (MSC) of the U.S. Army Materiel Command (AMC). The mission of STRICOM is to provide centralized management and direction for all research, development, acquisition and fielding of Army Distributed Simulation (ADS). The mission includes cradle to grave life cycle acquisition beginning with tech base programs and following through with each phase of the acquisition process. The Commander centrally directs, coordinates and supports the materiel development, training devices, simulations, simulators and advanced acquisitions and sustainment activities through the functional matrix organizations and four project managers. Serves as the focal point for administrative actions between the Division and other organizational elements.

MAJOR DUTIES

The incumbent assists the supervisor by relieving the Division Chief of clerical and administrative support work such as:

1. Receives all visitors and telephone calls to the supervisor. Ascertains the nature of call or business of visitors and determines appropriate action. Refers important business or high-ranking visitors to the supervisor. When that is not practical, take messages for their attention or makes later appointments for visitors. Refers business requiring an engineering qualified response to the appropriate technical area within the organization. The incumbent is authorized to give out administrative and readily available information to callers upon determination of their right to receive it.

- Keeps the supervisor's calendar and schedules appointments and meetings upon own initiative based upon personal knowledge of the supervisor's workload and current issues of importance. Reminds supervisor of appointments and briefs supervisor on the matters to be considered before the scheduled meeting. On own initiative reschedules appointments when it becomes apparent that supervisor will not be able to meet previous schedules.

- Responds to requests for information concerning Division functions. Personally prepares responses on schedule from source material. Searches for, assembles and summarizes information as required from files and documents. Anticipates need for information and systematically prepares material so that it is immediately available for supervisor's needs. In the absence of the Division Chief, in cases that it would normally receive their personal attention, assumes responsibility for ensuring that requests for action or information are made known to responsible Division personnel who can satisfy the request. Follow up on required actions and informs the supervisor of their status. When the Division Chief is absent but assessable, decides whether important or emergency matters should be brought to the Chief's attention.

2. Arranges for conferences, including such matters as location, schedule, agenda, and attendance list. Assembles background material for the Chief.

- Receives and controls mail routing items directly to the appropriate office for action, assembling background information before routing mail to the supervisor, and notifying the supervisor of pending delays and their reasons.

- Reads incoming correspondence, publications, and directives which may affect the Division. Determines those that can be acted upon personally and takes necessary action. When necessary, uses initiative to obtain clarification of instructions from originating offices or appropriate focal points. Determines which are of importance or interest to the Division Chief and refers them accordingly.

- Reviews outgoing correspondence for signature of the supervisor for proper format, conformance with procedural instructions, grammar, typographical accuracy and necessary attachments. Returns such communications to originator for correction when not in conformance with known policies, or when correspondence regulations have not been followed. Advises and instructs author to obtain higher degree of compliance with general Division policies and correspondence regulations.
